Birds in Art Art in Birds

Photo-Video-Art Challenge

A broken down nest in winter, a song recording, video of a bird perching on your window, something that makes you pause, look twice, laugh, cry.

People of all ages are invited to:

Go outside and look for art in birds. Get creative. Take photos, do some painting, write a story, create a sculpture. What do you see in a bird that is beautiful, stirring, or inspirational?

How to enter

1. Email your photo, art, or video entry to urbanbirds@cornell.edu. Links are acceptable for videos.
2. Write "Art in Birds/Birds in Art contest" in the subject line.
3. Include your name and mailing address
4. Tell us why you submitted your entry to the Arts in Birds/Birds in Art contest.
5. Send us your entry before February 28, 2009

Selected images will be posted on the Celebrate Urban Birds website. By entering, you agree that you are granting the Cornell Lab of Ornithology a royalty-free, perpetual license to use the images for any purpose, including but not limited to publications, websites, and commercial products benefiting our education, outreach, and research programs.

Visit www.CelebrateUrbanBirds.org for details.

Prizes include bird sound recordings, books, gift certificates, and more. We'll send the first 50 entries a copy of our "Doves and pigeons" poster by Julie Zickefoose. Check website for details.
